

ABSTRACT

A multi-line power transmission system includes a first power transmission line having a first impedance characteristic, a second power transmission line, in parallel with the first power transmission line, and having a second impedance characteristic less than the first 5 impedance characteristic, and a power flow controller, coupled to the second power transmission line, for controlling at least one of the magnitude and direction of the power flowing through the second power transmission line.

20721458.doc